Dewan Perwakilan Rakyat, or "House of Representatives of the Republic of Indonesia" DPR-RI (The House of Representatives)

Dewan Perwakilan Rakyat or "House of Representatives of the Republic of Indonesia" was established by the decision of the Indonesian Central Indonesian National Committee which was set up by the President on August 29th 1945, or 12 days after the Proclamation of Indonesian Independence, in Jakarta.

The tasks and mandate of the House was clearly described in the Constitution. A unicameral system of parliament, the Indonesian House holds great power in the structure of Indonesia’s statecraft. The Members of DPR are directly elected by the people, and the term of office is 5 years.

Members of the Indonesian House of Representatives of current period (2014 - 2019) started on 1st October 2014, the same year as the president election. It consists of 560 members parliament from 10 factions including 97 women parliamentarians, 17,32% from the total members of parliament. All members of parliament sit in commissions and complementary bodies. There are 11 commissions in addition to the Consultative Chairs Committee, Legislation Committee, Budget Committee, Household Committee, Committee for Inter-Parliament Cooperation and Ethics Committee.

The session year of the House of Representatives starts from 16 August until 15 August of the following year. The session year is divided into 4 session periods, it includes sitting time and recess.

The Indonesian House of Representatives attaches great importance to be active in international commitments and parliamentary diplomacy. It has hosted numerous international parliamentary events, and now is honored to welcome the parliamentarians and participants of the 6th GOPAC Global Conference in Yogyakarta.
GOPAC Indonesia was established on 12 December 2012. Started with 39 Members of the Indonesian House of Representatives, its establishment was marked by launching a declaration, which realized that the fight against corruption shall be done in comprehensive and integrated efforts including observing ethics and morale as well as strengthening the integrity of public officials.

GOPAC Indonesia adopted a National Action Plan including a commitment to creating an organizational structure and its supporting system, and to strengthen the integrity and capacity of its members. GOPAC Indonesia also adopted its Article of Association in 2013.

Further, GOPAC Indonesia has carried out several capacity building activities for its members including a workshop on engaging parliamentarians in the United Nations Convention Against Corruption and a workshop on funding of political campaigns and anti-money laundering.

GOPAC Indonesia supports the Indonesian House to host the sixth Global Conference to show Indonesian parliamentarians’ commitment to the fight against corruption.
